

JOHN W. G. ROSECRANS, A.I.A. - President and Owner

Bachelor of Architecture, Oklahoma State University, 1988

John is passionate about the work he is doing with Dimensional Dynamics, Architects and Planners in serving the ministry needs of churches through their facility designs. He continues with the company's vision, started in 1971, to serve churches throughout the United States by leading them through the processes of planning, designing, and construction of quality, functional facilities to meet their ministry needs and financial abilities.

Joining the firm in 1991 and under the direct tutelage of the Rev. L. Gordon Bucy founder of Dimensional Dynamics, John honed his strong design skills which enabled him to quickly translate the multi-faceted needs of church clients into practical solutions. His sensitivity toward functional concerns allows him to integrate all details of the design process into a functional finished facility.

John, a native of California, graduated from Oklahoma State University with a Bachelors of Architecture. After graduation, John moved to the East Coast to work in the field of Architectural Design and Planning. He has work with the firms of: John M Dickey, Architect; Shriver and Holland Associates; David Beck Associates, Cee Jay Frederick Associates and Dimensional Dynamics, Architects and Planners where he has been the President and Owner since 1998.

Professionally, John is a member of AIA, NCARB and serves as the Vice-Chair of the East Marlborough Township Historic Commission and is an eMi Representative for Pennsylvania and Delaware. He has also previously served on the Boards of the Chadds Ford Historic Society and the Chadds Ford Business Association.

Personally, John served for many years as an elder in the Kennett Square Presbyterian Church and on many committees of the Church and Presbytery. John and his wife, Lora, are currently members of Manor Presbyterian Church, located in Cochranville, Pa. They reside in a one hundred and fifty plus year old barn which they started converting into their residence in 1993. John's appreciation of renovation concerns in older facilities comes from this "hands on" perspective. While rehabilitating this structure into his own residence, his understanding of the importance of master planning and phasing has greatly increased.

Upon the sudden death of Rev. Bucy in 1993, John continued to support the vision set forth by the founder years earlier. In 1998, John was given the opportunity to take the reins of Dimensional Dynamics, thus allowing him the ability to not only reinforce the previous vision to serve church clients throughout the United States, but to also guide Dimensional Dynamics through the ever-changing technologies of today.

Since joining the firm, John has been delighted to meet, direct, design and oversee the construction of church facilities in many different states, denominations and architectural styles. His continuing desire to serve church clients to meet all their facility needs is paramount to his guidance of Dimensional Dynamics, Architects and Planners, Inc.
